

CMBL - Manuscript Processing Overview

Electronic submission is now mandatory for Cellular & Molecular Biology Letters. Manuscripts should be submitted via the Paper Processing System (EDIttool), an online submission system available at <http://cdbl.editool.com>. A short manual on the submission system is available on the EDIttool web page and also on our web page. In case of any problems manuscripts can be emailed directly to the Editorial Office (cdbl@cdbl.org.pl).

1. In order to submit a manuscript via the EDIttool, authors should first register themselves as new users, and then upload their manuscripts along with a covering letter. The covering letter should contain all the important details about the submission, namely: your full name (as submitting author), the full title of your article, a full list of the authors, your e-mail address and physical contact address, telephone/fax numbers, the number of attached files, the details of any previous or concurrent submissions, and 2-3 names of suggested reviewers.
2. Together with submission, authors are asked to send the signed Transfer of Copyright Agreement form as soon as possible (the pdf file is available for download).
3. The submitted manuscript is initially reviewed by the Editor. He then sends it on to 2 to 5 selected referees for a specialist review. The Editor decides whether the manuscript can be further considered for publication or not. Next, the Editor asks the authors to make revisions according to the outcome of the peer review.
4. After making corrections, the authors should upload a revised version of the manuscript along with detailed replies to the reviewers' comments to the EDIttool. The revised fragments of the manuscript should be in black font with a yellow highlight.
5. Please note that many acceptable papers require minor revision or condensation. It is in the mutual interest of both the authors and the journal that amended manuscripts be returned promptly. A revised paper will only retain its original date of receipt if it is received by the Editor within 60 days of the date of return to the authors.
6. The Editor refers the revised manuscript back to the referees. Based on those second reviews, the Editor decides whether the manuscript can be accepted for publication or not. If the corrections are satisfactory in general, but the manuscript still requires some revision, the Editor sends it to the authors for final, minor corrections. In the case of the second revision of an article, the authors need to return it within 14 days.

7. The Editor will officially inform the author about the final decision. The manuscript then undergoes language editing (after which it is again returned again to the authors for final acceptance of changes), technical editing, and proofreading, and is finally published, first online, and later in print form.

All the steps listed above are taken inside the EDItool system. Authors can follow the editorial process in the system using their login and password, which are received during registration and choosing the option "Paper's history". For further details, please contact the Editorial Office at cmb1@cmb1.org.pl.
